Ware Trophy

FRIDAY. We met at about 8pm outside the garage and packed the gear into the van. With everybody ready we set off cruising past the cheering crowds on the vans maiden voyage. On arrival we set about finding the camp site. This was found, after walking through half a ton of mud, (a Broadstone speciality,) near the water tower. After pitching the tents we "crashed out", only to be kept awake by Paul Wickett's and Gary Wilson's repertoire of songs, jokes and insults which were hurled at virtually everyone.

SATURDAY. We managed to get up at about 09.15, cooked breakfast, (if you can call it that,) and by 11.00 when the first troops arrived the site was more or less ready. When all the troops arrived they were told about the first game which required them to build a bivouac before lunch. After lunch Gary Wilson and myself set off to mark out a route for the night exercise. At about 6pm we had tea and when this was all finished the night exercise was ready to start. The Unit were in their positions by 8pm, but owing to an easy wide game organised by John Bowden, none of the teams finished, while the Unit all froze to death.
